How Morrissey Settled with Fish.

The Fifth Avenue Hotel, which has been the scene, slightly, of many stirring incidents growing out of the gold excitement, was this evening alive with bulls and bears. Mr. Hyser, a leading banker and heavy dealer in governments, while discussing with some friends the ruin which the panic had caused, saw Senator Wilson in the crowd, and addressed him as follows: "Senator, the government ought to do something to settle this matter. I think the sales of gold have rather encouraged it." To which Senator Wilson replied that there was no occasion for it. Mr. Hyser: "The thing will have to be stopped. I know of one man who will not stand it. I mean John Morrissey. He went to Fish's office yesterday, and although refused admission, he rushed up stairs and saw Fish. Morrissey demanded the amount he had lost, namely, $83,000. There was a brief pause, after which Morrissey said, 'If you don't pay me that money now, I'll leave a mark on you for the remainder of your life.' The money was paid. [Addressing Senator Wilson] And I tell you, also, that the brokers of the street are going to protect themselves."

Senator Wilson made no comments on the matter, and Mr. Hyser and his audience soon after dispersed.—Cin. Com.

Father Cleveland, the veteran City Missionary of Boston, received, on Friday, a letter from his son in Texas, who is in good health. The young man is seventy-one years of age, and lately escaped being the victim of an Indian massacre, three miles from his residence.

The Great Yosemite Waterfall.
All half a great waterfall.
Who to come up of our life,
Gives life to the disappearance.

Without nucleus drops or falls,
Drops cleave from out the stem,
Fills the basin with life and death,
With the heat of all the rocks.

Downward—down Yosemite.

With root from out the valley,
Where California sun doth shine,
Giving wealth to poor mortals,
Beyond the reach of lowliness.

Wealth of health and happiness,
Its blessings none should slight,
Do you want it?—Would you have it?
Use down's Great Yosemite.

Come ye sick, diseased, dissolute,

Why should you pine and die?

Ye feeble, faint and languishing,

Come, these glorious waters try,

See how these quicks and nostrums,

Give strength to thy body to live,

Doctor's Great Yosemite!
